by

HIS EXCELLENCY - AMBASSADOR J.B. BERENGUER CESAR

* * * *

OVERSEAS...--...TICKER...

BELGRADE DATELINE -- (Special to The Bulletin) -- This place is like a magnet to foreign correspondents of all varieties. There is always a steady stream, and when a crisis arises it swells to a flood.... Recently we regretfully said goodbye to BILL KING, leaving his job as info officer at the U.S. Embassy for home leave and re-assignment. (The KINGs can now be reached % Press Billets, PIO, EUSAK, APO 301, Postmaster, San Francisco.-- Ed. Note.)... (Continued on page 2)

EUROPE BOUND?

"THE PRESIDENT"—deluxe transatlantic service in luxurious double-decked "Strato" Clippers. Lower-deck lounge. Meals by Maxim's of Paris. Berths available at modest charge.

"THE RAINBOW"—thrifty Clipper tourist service in million-dollar aircraft... yes, the 300-mph Super-6 Clippers used on The Rainbow were specially designed and built for this popular service!

*Trade Mark, Reg. U.S. Pat. Off.

More people-by far-fly to Europe on PAN AMERICAN WORLD'S MOST EXPERIENCED AIRLINE LOW "THRIFT SEASON" FARES NOV 1 - MARCH 31... FROM $373 ROUND TRIP

Overseas Ticker (from Pg. 1) We've just seen off another former Belgrader. Ronnie Preston, who was here for Reuters and is now in Vienna for the London Times, came back to collect a bride. Alex Singleton of AP provided the space for the wedding reception in a Hotel Moskva suite. Singleton, it is generally recognized, is now the dean of the press corps here, since MEYER HANDLER took off for Bonn... Newcomers' category include Ed Clark, ex-UP, now with Time, his wife Katty (Chicago Trib and others), and a Tass character, Ivan Kozin...

Kozin's arrival is considered part of the Red peace offensive and he and the Russian embassy staff have all come out of their shells a great deal lately. Recently, I actually had a long and completely human conversation with the Russian press attache about the Djilas case...

On the gone list is Ernest Halperin, Neue Zuericher Zeitung, who has moved his hqs to Vienna. --(By HELEN FISHER, UP)

MEXICO CITY DATELINE -- (Special to The Bulletin) -- Correspondents here were watching the Guatemalan situation with one eye this week, keeping the other on the approaching Inter-American economic conference in Caracas -- and meanwhile trying to handle their home grounds where the migrant labor problem was kicking up again...

Ambassador Francis White called the second press conference he has had in his first year's stay to give the U.S. side of the breaking-off of the so-called "bracero" agreement. It looked like the good U.S.-Mexican relations were going to be tarnished as Mexico City papers accused the U.S. of high-handed treatment of the "bracero" matter, but President Ruiz Cortines relieved the tension by announcing it was only "an incident" that shouldn't affect the good relations of the two countries. The U.S. representatives, however, will hardly be "palsy" around the Mexican foreign office any more. Foreign Minister Padillo Nervo was said to be a bit miffed over the way things were handled...

The Foreign Correspondent's Association held its traditional annual meeting at the Jockey Club, with some 35 members and wives appearing to see the Foreign Correspondent's Handicap run (horse named "Inlaid" won). The election of new officers resulted in the naming of your correspondent as the new president, with Charles Guptill of AP as vice president, BOB BENJAMIN of Vision as secretary, ROBERT LUBAR of Time also as secretary, and Roberto Katz of Agence France-Presse as head of the credentials committee. (Editor's Note: It was office-getting month for The Bulletin's Mexico City man, JOHN WILHELM. He was also elected secretary of the American Club of Mexico.)....

Visitors to Mexico City recently included TURNER CATLEDGE of the New York Times...

James McGlincy of the New York Daily News was here on his honeymoon (having married the very beautiful assistant to Anna Rosenberg, former ass't sec'y of defense.) He's on the News cable desk....Jerry Main, head of the INS bureau here, has been transferred to Madrid, and was succeeded by John Wix of the LA bureau. Jerry was given a farewell toast by his colleagues before taking off for his new post....Other comings-and-goings: Roy Larson of Time-Life reportedly here; President J. CLIFFORD STARK scheduled to arrive February 1; Walter Trohan of Chicago Tribune's Washington bureau flying in later in February; Sydney Gruson, the New York Times' chief correspondent in Mexico, leaving for Guatemala. (Editor's Note: Shortly after receipt of this copy from Correspondent WILHELM came the news that Gruson and Marshall Bannell of NBC had been expelled from Guatemala.); Flora Lewis went to Tampico to cover the first uranium murder case and said the corpse was "radio-active" enough to make a geiger counter stutter. (A wife had discarded her husband by using uranium nitrate--and, for one thing, Mexican authorities would like to know where she got it. But even Flora couldn't get the wife to talk, she says.)--(by JOHN WILHELM).

 The average Russian is not a Communist and is not deeply influenced by Soviet ideology, Tom Whitney told an attentive OPC luncheon audience last Thursday. The veteran Moscow observer based his opinion on experiences during the past decade as, first, a U.S. Embassy official and, since 1947, an AP correspondent in the Red capital. He returned to the U.S. last fall with his attractive Russian wife, who was present for his talk.

Whitney's view that most Russians--the peasants and the workers--are not Communists was based partly on his belief that the Soviet internal propaganda apparatus isn't nearly as large and effective as is generally supposed. It simply doesn't reach most Russians, he said, noting that the combined circulation of all Russian newspapers--weeklies and whatnot--totals only 37 million, out of a 215 million population.

The S.R.O. throng of Members and guests heard Whitney give a forceful and interesting analysis of Russian attitudes—the feelings of the USSR people themselves, not the regime which rules them. Among the characteristics cited by Whitney were: Ivan—the average guy, in Russia—is extremely patriotic, "fully as patriotic as the average Englishman." There is much truth, he declared, to that part of an old Russian song which says, "I'm not afraid of Siberia because it is also Russian land." Russians would rather die in Siberia than live elsewhere, he said. The Red government has succeeded in mobilizing this feeling to the Communist ideology.

Another attitude--and a key one--is the friendly feeling Russians, as a whole, have for foreigners, particularly Americans. Whitney said he was convinced of this after numerous experiences over the years. On one occasion, among several mentioned to make this point, Whitney told how a Russian chauffeur, not knowing Whitney was an American, demanded 50 rubles for helping the ex-embassy officer get his car going on a muddy road. When the Russian discovered Whitney was American, he refused the money. "Just tell the people in the U.S.," the chauffeur said, "that I like them."

"So I'm telling you now," Whitney said smilingly, as he paid back the "debt".

The AP correspondent urged every effort be exerted to "stimulate this basic friendliness". Success in this direction would not wreck the Soviet regime--which Whitney fears will survive a long while--but it would help doom the Red's world revolution.
